FOOD

Welcome To TAISON

The art of Chinese cuisine has a long history of thousands of years. It varies from province to province. There are five major styles of cooking namely, Cantonese, Manchurian, Shanghai, Szechuan and Hunan. Most of them are now commonly served in New York Metropolitan and suburban areas except Hunan style.

We for the first time, are proud to introduce authentic Hunan style to this community in its real country and home cooking style.

Hunan specializes in smoked, steamed, dry sauted, tangy, spicy with hot bean sauce, red hot sauce, and fish flavor. It is spicy, yet not oily or starchy.

PLEASE BE ASSURED TO TRY ANY DISH YOU DESIRE & WE GUARANTEE YOU WILL LIKE IT AFTER YOU TRY IT.

By JAY JACOBS

"Beggar's Chicken" as served at Tang's (and nowhere else in the city, to my knowledge) is one of the supreme masterpieces of Chinese art. Sublime! Schuan!"

The New York Times

Chris's Journal By Bryan Miller: "The House Special at Tang's, a smart and comfortable Chinese restaurant is called Beggar's Chicken."

The chicken is ceremoniously carried to the table, so diners can see the Chinese inscriptions painted on the crust (you can have 'Happy Birthday' or other messages in Chinese by asking ahead of time)."

STENDAHL - WINCN

"One of the best Chinese restaurants in midtown on the east side is Tang's. The Tang's possesses a pleasantly modern decor and has a compelling 'tucked wearing staff' Tang's menu is a full one, and almost every dish tried has been outstanding, classic but with an individual accent."

DAILY NEWS

"True Chinese cooking is not easily found in midtown, authentically spiced Sichuan food is not easily found anywhere. Tang's knows how Sichuan food should taste and has the courage to serve it."

NEW YORK POST

By MARTIN BURDEN

"This restaurant is a quietly handsome spot that serves first-rate food. We'd like to visit again to sample more."

BOB LAPE - WABC

"Tang's offers a selection of classic and original dishes. Delicious!"

WHERE Magazine

"The restaurant offers dishes which are prepared from traditional recipes brought from the Schuan province by the Tang's family."

A NOTE ON SHANGHAI & SOOCHOW CUISINE

Shanghai is well known as the largest seaport in China and the largest metropolis in the world. Soochow, the capital of ancient Kingdoms and a cultural center for centuries, is located about one hundred miles west of Shanghai and is famous for its gardens - a replica of one of them is the Metropolitan Museum of Arts of New York. As is often the case, the combination of the wealth of merchant princes and the fancy of men of letters and arts enhanced the quality of life in this area, including the culinary arts. Thus, it inspired the Chinese saying: "There is a paradise high above in Heaven, but there are Soochow and Hangchow down on earth." Shanghai and Soochow cooking fittingly became the representative cuisine of the East Coast of China. One of the main characteristics of this cuisine is highlighting the natural flavor of fresh foods. This which can be somewhat fiery to the uninitiated palate.

Mr. Tang, the only master chef trained in China in the old tradition now working in New York, started as an apprentice in his early teens in the well known Stark and Pine Pavilion in Soochow. He then immigrated to Tokyo, where he served as executive chef of the renowned Srau Restaurant for ten years. His mastery of the intricacies of Chinese cuisine has been acclaimed as peerless by both Chinese and Japanese food critics. Some of his outstanding creations are offered here for the first time in the United States as Chef's Suggestions.

By FRANCIS R. ANGELINO

The youthful Mrs. Tang, carving on the family tradition began in China. Serves CHINESE HOME-STYLE COOKING.

New York Times

Mimi Sheraton
"The management offers a fascinating array of unusual dishes, very well prepared."

By Jay Jacobs
It was an awesome performance, INSPIRED BY A DAZZLING ARRAY OF IRRESTIBLE FOODS.

By MARTIN BURDEN

This restaurant is a quietly handsome spot that serves first rate food. We'd like to visit again to sample more of Mrs. Tang's work.

DAILY NEWS

TRUE CHINESE COOKING IS not easily found in midtown, authentically poised Szechuan food is not easily found anywhere. Tang, knows how Szechuan food should taste and has the courage to serve it.

DOB LAPE-
TV EYEWITNESS NEWS
"Tang's offers a selection of classic and original dishes. Meals were delicious on both visits."

WHERE Magazines
The restaurant is offers dishes which are prepared from traditional recipes brought from the Szechuan province by the Tang family.
